Notice to potential contributors to The American Journal of Clinical Nutrition

In the last few months the editorial office has received an increasing number of manuscripts in envelopes that have been damaged seriously in the mail. In some instances the Post Office has had to re-wrap envelopes; in other cases the envelopes have arrived with ripped margins resulting in the loss of enclosed figures and other contents.

It is urged that contributors make certain that manuscripts are submitted in durable envelopes, preferably reinforced at the margins. The need for reinforcing envelopes is especially great when the mailing contains a large number of pages and enclosures.
