

ASCN Membership

The American Society for Clinical Nutrition, Inc, is now accepting applications for ASCN active and associate membership. Eligible individuals for active membership are those who have conducted and published meritorious original investigations in clinical nutrition and/or those who have made superior contributions to the nutrition sciences through teaching, administration, or technical service.

Associate membership is meant for recent postgraduate physicians, teachers, and investigators who show promise but have not yet had the opportunity or time to satisfy publication requirements for active membership.

Both categories of membership to ASCN require prior membership in AIN; however, nomination to both societies can be considered simultaneously. Membership includes a subscription to The American Journal of Clinical Nutrition. Contact ASCN, 9650 Rockville Pike, Bethesda, MD 20814. (301) 530-7110.

AIN/ASCN Student Membership

The American Society for Clinical Nutrition, Inc, is now accepting applications for AIN/ASCN student membership. Students must have an ASCN member sponsor. Dues for membership will be $35; membership includes a subscription to The American Journal of Clinical Nutrition. Contact ASCN, 9650 Rockville Pike, Bethesda, MD 20814. (301) 530-7110.

Results of Survey of AJCN Foreign Subscribers

The American Journal of Clinical Nutrition will not be offering expedited mail service to foreign subscribers at this time. Subscribers outside North America were asked if they would be willing to pay an additional fee to receive their journal by expedited mail service. Forty-two percent of the respondents said "yes," and 58% said "no." Unfortunately, expedited mail service cannot be offered on an individual basis; however, air-delivery rates are available upon request from Williams & Wilkins.

Revised Reprint Available
