- Sex Variations in the Nutritional State of Urban Zulu Adults. II. Serum Protein Levels and Prevalence of Edema . . . . . 229
B. GAMPEL, J. H. ABRAMSON, C. SLOME AND N. SCOTCH

This careful clinical nutrition study not only sheds new light on standards found in certain population groups, but also explores the differences in clinical and laboratory findings between men and women. More surveys of this type are needed.

- Serum and Liver Cholesterol, Total Lipids and Lipid Phosphorus Levels of Rats under Various Dietary Regimens . . . . . 236
E. B. WILCOX AND L. S. GALLOWAY

In this well planned experiment the effects of various amounts of saturated (lard) and unsaturated fats (cottonseed oil), serum and liver lipids were compared. Differences in serum liver responses were noted. The effects of lecithin and saponin were also determined. The results add additional data to a problem of considerable clinical importance.
